CHICAGO (June 12, 2024) — Lathrop GPM is pleased to announce the firm’s Chicago office has officially opened the doors to its new office space at 155 North Wacker. The firm moved from the building’s 30th floor to a newly designed space on the 38th floor designed to support the office’s continued growth and hybrid working needs.

The new office continues the firm’s national transition to a hoteling-hybrid model. So far, the firm has completed redesign efforts in Chicago, Denver, and Minneapolis, with additional office moves underway this year in St. Louis, Dallas, and Boston.

“I’m excited to officially settle into our new office space,” said Bryan Minier, Partner in Charge of Lathrop GPM’s Chicago office. “The intentionality of the redesign is evident, and we’re happy to offer our team and clients a contemporary, comfortable, and flexible space at the same prime location as our previous office.”

The new office’s features include a state-of-the-art conference area with private access for clients and guests, a blend of open seating, and private assigned workspaces. Architecture firm DLR Group, which has been involved in designing all the new transformed offices, created the space.

“This incredible transformation of our new Chicago office stands as a testament to our dedication to the needs of both our team and clients,” said Chicago-based Courtney Landon, Lathrop GPM’s Chief Operating Officer. “We’re proud to add Chicago to our growing list of reimagined offices and look forward to the official unveiling of the new St. Louis and Boston offices in the months ahead.”

Over the last few years, the Chicago office has continued to grow with attorney and staff additions, including most recently, with the addition of partner Brent Vincent to the firm’s Tort, Insurance, and Environmental practice group. The attorneys based in Chicago focus on numerous practice areas including insurance recovery disputes, corporate and business transactions, intellectual property (IP), IP litigation, franchise, and financial services. The Chicago office has grown to house Lathrop GPM’s second-largest number of IP-focused attorneys and professionals.
